The Value of Ecological Restoration

The rich experiences of his youth in nature's "outdoor classrooms" are the foundation of who David Cordray is today. Wishing to give others the opportunity to participate in their natural heritage, he will share his journey to finding ecological awareness and his insight into why we must actively participate in restoring the health of our lands. He will explore reasons for striving for ecological health, how the work benefits others and how we can influence a greater ecological awareness.

Please join us to hear David Cordray and nine other native plant experts on a full range of natural landscaping and native plant topics for urban, suburban and rural yards.

Space is limited. To Register & for program details please go to:

As an engineer, David Cordray's first career was working with environmental monitoring satellites. He changed careers in 2008, and brought his creative ideas, work ethic and knowledge to natural lands management. One of his research interests is native landscape design methods and planning to enhance the human outdoor experience. Since 2001, he and his wife, Debra, have been actively restoring their 100 acres near Belleville, WI to prairie and oak savanna.
